HERBERT GOES TO OHIO UNIV.

MARYVILLE HIGH SCHOOL COACH IS PROMOTED.

REPORTS SEPTEMBER 1

Will Be Head Track and Line Coach At Alma Mater, Where He Was A Star.

William H. Herbert, athletic coach and teacher of history at the Maryville High School will leave Maryville at the end of this school year to become head line coach in football and head track coach at Ohio University, Athens, O. Mr. Herbert, who came to Maryville last fall, is an alumnus of the Ohio school of the class of '25. While a student there, he was one of the leading athletes of the state.

In football he played three years, his first year at halfback and his last two years at guard. At the end of his last two football seasons, he was named all-Ohio guard.

Holds Two State Records.

In track, he was a three-letter man. The 440-yard dash and the 220-yard low hurdles were his specialties. In each of these events, he holds the record for Ohio. In the quarter, his mark is 49.4 seconds and 24.2 seconds is his record for the low hurdles. He also won a letter in basketball.

Mr. Herbert will also have charge of several classes in the physical education department of the University. He will attend the University of Minnesota this summer, where he will be an assistant in the physical education department, and where he will also take work in theory of physical education. He will go to Athens for his new position on September 1.

Has Been Successful Here.

Since coming to Maryville, Coach Herbert has had remarkable success with his athletic teams. In football last fall, his team won six out of eight games played, losing only to Maysville and Cameron. In basketball his quintet won all of its conference games, was first in the Northwest Missouri High School Basketball tournament held at the State Teachers College, and placed fourth in the state tournament held in Columbia last week.

New Position an Honor.

Mr. Herbert's new position is quite an honor and is a tribute to his ability. It is seldom that universities take men of his limited coaching experience. He is 25 years old.

The new position carries quite an increase in salary. The Ohio figure is around $3,000 annually.

Mr. Herbert i sthe second Maryville High School coach to be lost to a University. Harold G. Ebert, who preceded him, went from here to a similar position at Drake University, Des Moines.

T. B. Groves Dies at Wray, Colo., Tuesday

Death Came to Former Resident of This County—Was 63 Years Old, Being Born South of Maryville.

Mrs. A. J. Tarpley received a message last night announcing the death of her uncle, T. B. Groves of Wray, Colo., which occurred at 6 o'clock last evening. Death was due to a stroke the message stated. No word concerning funeral arrangements had been received late this afternoon.

Mr. Groves had been failing in health since an attack of the flu early last fall, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Groves of Maryville, had been at his home in Wray since last October. Mr. and Mrs. Groves returned home only Monday evening from a six weeks trip to McMinnville, Ore., where they were called by the death of Mrs. Groves' step-mother, Mrs. Frank Sisson, six weeks ago.

Mr. Groves was born Nov. 23, 1863, in the Pleasant Grove neighborhood, south of Maryville, where he lived until a young man. He had been associated with his sons, Barr and Paul Groves, in the lumber business at Wray for a number of years. He also leaves a daughter, Ruth, who is taking a course in dieteties at St. Luke's Hospital, Denver, Colo., and two sisters, Mrs. Ora Grigsby of Columbus, Ohio, and Mrs. Ed Perdew of Wichita, Kan. A brother, Seymour Groves, died in Denver last October. N. Sisson of Maryville is an uncle of Mrs. Groves.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hellmers, W. M. Fenton, auditor of the Nebraska Gas and Electric Company, and F. A. Guenther, all of Lincoln, Neb., were in Maryville on business today.

Services At First Christian Church Gain In Interest And Attendance—Ted Jones Is Singer.

About three hundred persons have signed the pledge to do everything possible to make the pre-Easter revival at the First Christian Church a success. The revival, now in progress, is gaining in interest and attendance.

Ted Jones is in charge of the song service. He has had a number of years experience in evangelistic meetings throughout the country. He sang this morning at the College assembly.

The services begin every night at 7:30 o'clock. The Rev. R. E. Musgrave pastor of the church, will preach tonight on, "What It Means to Profess Christ." Tomorrow night, the theme will be, "Conversion."

MAY HOLD UP WORK ON ROAD

LACK OF FUNDS MAY CAUSE DELAY ON SOUTH HIGHWAY.

MAKE SURVEY PLANS

N. R. Sack Expects Portion of Maryville-Ravenwood Road Can Be Placed Under Contract This Year.

Because of insufficient funds, there will probably be no work done on the state highway between Maryville and St. Joseph this season, according to N. R. Sack, division engineer of the state highway department for Northwest Missouri.

Because of this, the route has not been definitely located, Mr. Sack said.

State highway engineers are now working on the plans for Route 18, between Maryville and Ravenwood, and expected to have them completed in sufficient time to that a portion of this route can be placed under contract this spring. It is thought there will be insufficient money to improve the entire distance between Maryville and Ravenwood this year but the road improvement will be made as far as available funds permit.

It is understood, although these reports cannot be confirmed, that a concrete road nine feet wide will be put down on the Maryville-Ravenwood road.

M. N. Windle of the Atkinson Paving Co., who has the contract for the paving of the Maryville-Pickering road this summer, was in Maryville a few days ago and it is understood that paving work will start on this north road within the next few weeks. The ditching and straightening of Canal branch has been completed.

Clay County Officer Goes on Trial Today

Raymond Cummins Is Charged With Bribery And Misappropriation Of Official Funds.

Liberty, Mo., March 24.—Before a crowded courtroom, the trial of Raymond Cummins, Clay County prosecutor, charged with bribery and misappropriation of official funds, began here today.

Following selection of the jury, the state began presentation of evidence in the first five misdemeanor charges recently returned in an indictment, as the outgrowth of Cummins' alleged failure to make reports of fees received during the first two quarters of his term in 1925.

Cummins also faces a felony charge. Under indictment of six charges, Cummins still remains as county prosecutor.

Farm Near Orrsburg Brings $200 An Acre

A farm of 120 acres just west of Orrsburg, sold on March 7 to Elias J. and Mary C. Brown by Joseph R. Allen, brought $24,000, or $200 an acre, according to a deed filed today with Mrs. Mamie Clardy, county recorder. The farm includes the west half of the southeast quarter and the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 16, township 65, range 34.

Another deed filed today records the transfer of lot 2, block 52, in the original town of Hopkins from Mrs. Augusta B. Fleming to Wallis and Alta May Jackson and Grover C. and Sarah E. Jackson for a consideration of $1,500. The purchasers were residents of Taylor County, Ia., and the transaction was made on March 6.

PERU WINS IN DEBATE TODAY

S. T. C. TEAM LOSES BY 3 TO 0 DECISION.

HONORS ARE AWARDED

Gold And Silver Basketballs Given To Members Of The 1926 Bearcat Squad.

The debating team from the Peru, Neb., State Teachers College won a unanimous decision over the local State Teachers College team this morning at the College. The Nebraska team upheld the negative side of the question, "Resolved: That the Constitution of the United States should be amended to give Congress power to regulate child labor."

Roy Chamberlain and Wolds Wilhoft were the Peru debaters, while Fred Street and David Max represented the local institution.

Visitors Slightly Better.

The Peru team had a slight edge on the Maryville forensic team. The visitors were debating the question for the fifth time, while the local debators were making their first appearance on the subject. Wilhoft, particularly, for the visitors, seemed to have an edge on the other speakers. He was more forceful in his presentation of the subject ,and his rebuttal was perhaps a bit stronger.

The main argument of the Maryville team was that national results would be better to remove the evils of child labor than those of the different states. The debaters told of the need for uniform legislation against child labor, and that it would be in accord with balance between the powers of the nation and the states.

Child Labor Minimized.

The Peru team minimized the number of child laborers in the country, and argued that the different states are meeting the situation adequately. They also maintained that the proposed plan would be out of accord with our form of national government.

The judges for the debate were Grover Sparks, K. D. Cross, and L. W. Booher, all attorneys of Savannah. Dr. Fred Keller of the College acted as chairman.

Gold Basketballs Awarded.

Before the debate, Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College awarded gold basketballs to the eight basketball letter men of this year and silver basketballs to four other members of the squad. These were given by the College in appreciation for the work of the team in winning the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship.

The basketballs bore a large green M with the words, "State Champions," in black enamel, and the name of the owner engraved on the back. Gold balls were given to Captain Aldrich, Captain-Elect Joy, Blomfield, Burks, Berst, Ungles, O'Banion, and Hedges. Silver basketballs went to Chick, Davison, Baldwin, and Edwards.

A. A. U. W. Scholarship Given.

The junior A. A. U. W. scholarship was awarded at the assembly this morning to Miss Elizabeth Mills of Grant City, as the most outstanding junior girl of the institution.

The local A. A. U. W. chapter will award a medal to the most outstanding senior girl in connection with the commencement exercises this spring.

Former Resident Dies in Mountain View, Cal.

Funeral Services for L. W. Feltner Held March 12—Lived Near Maryville.

Word was received Monday of the death of L. W. Felter of Mountain View, Cal., a former resident of Nodaway County, on Wednesday, March 10. Funeral services and burial took place on March 12 at Mountain View. Mr. Felter had been ill of anemia for the last year.

Mr. Felter is survived by his widow, who is the sister of Mrs. R. L. Larmer of Maryville and Mrs. Clark Fryar and Mrs. Frank Bentley of Ravenwood; and two children, Faye Fern, a nurse in Los Angeles, and Coy W. Felter of Mountain View.

Mr. Felter's home was on a farm between Maryville and Ravenwood for a number of years. The family left this county about thirty-five years ago and for the last seven years had resided at Mountain View.

Attacks Policies of Democratic Candidate

Everett Hancock Charges State And St. Louis City Committees Dominated By Harry Hawes.

Montgomery, Mo., March 24.—An attack on the policies of Congressman Harry Hawes and Senator Reed was made in a statement today by Everett Hancock, candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant-governor in the last campaign. A threat to enter the coming campaign to defeat Hawes was issued by Hancock last week.

"I charge the state Democratic committee, as well as the St. Louis city committee with allowing the whole machinery of the party to become influenced and dominated by Mr. Hawes," Hancock said. "I want the Democrats of Missouri to know the situation that through this so-called harmony plan the machinery has become virtually subsidized with Harry Hawes and Senator Reed and their henchmen in charge.

MISS MILLS IS HONOR WINNER

RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP GIVEN BY LOCAL A. A. U. W.

RANKING JUNIOR GIRL

Besides Having S Plus Average in Studies, She Takes Part In Many Activities.

Miss Elizabeth Mills of Grant City has been awarded the $150 scholarship given by the local chapter of the American Association of University Women for the junior girl at the State Teachers College with the highest standing. This was decided at a meeting of the organization last night, and announced at the State Teachers College assembly this morning.

Miss Mills has completed ninety-one hours of scholastic work at the College. She has made a total of 223.75 honor points since starting in school here. This means an average of two and one-half honor points to the scholastic hour, and is equivalent to an average grade of S plus in her studies.

Is In Many Activities.

Besides being high in scholarship, Miss Mills is one of the outstanding students at the College in respect to extra-curricular activities. She is an active member of the Philomathean Literary Society and is a worker in the Young Women's Christian Association. She is editor of the 1926 Tower, the annual publication of the institution.

Miss Mills is majoring in music and minoring in art. She has been on several musical programs sponsored by the conservatory of music. She expects to take her A. B. degree from the College next year.

Medal to Senior Girl.

Plans were made at the January meeting of the A. A. U. W. for raising money for the scholarship. Details were worked out by a committee composed of Mrs. M. E. Ford, Mrs. C. C. Leeson, Mrs. Virgil Rathbun, Miss Olive DeLuce, and Miss Helen Manley.

The A. A. U. W., will award a medal to the highest ranking senior girl for this year in connection with the commencement exercises this spring. This, as the scholarship, is to be made an annual custom.

The award this morning was made by Miss Dora B. Smith in behalf of the organization.

Industrial Stocks in Another Big Decline

Smash Due To Heavy Unloading, High Call Loan Rates And General Business "Prosperity" Uncertainty.

New York, March 24.—A crash in industrial stock prices, which brought market values of leading industrial stocks down to the lowest levels of the year, occurred on the New York stock exchange today.

Heavy unloading of stocks, high call loan rates, the weakining of marginal accounts, reports of heavy cancellations of automobile orders, growing uncertainty as to the continuance of the present "prosperity era," and the gloomy condition of European nations were given as the reasons for the break.

As in the last previous smash, American Can, General Electric and Hudson Motors received the brunt of the bearish selling.

3 FULL DAYS OF CONTESTS

HIGH SCHOOL EVENTS AT COLLEGE APRIL 22, 23, 24.

ENTRIES END APRIL, 12

College to Provide Room and Board and Season Ticket for All Contestants.

The Northwest Missouri High School contests will occupy three full days at the State Teachers College this year. Beginning with home economics contests at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, April 22, and continuing until after the annual track and field meet Saturday afternoon, there will be contest after contest, with appropriate awards for the winners of each.

Outside of the track meet for both boys and girls, there will be fifty-three different contests, embracing such general subjects as agriculture, art, music, home economics, manual training, dramatics, reading and speaking, mechanical and architectural drawing, and shorthand and typewriting.

There will be two classes in many of the contests. In the agriculture contests, for example, schools maintaining vocational agriculture departments will be in Class A, while those not maintaining those departments will be in Class B. In other contests enrollment will be the determining factor as to class.

Each general contest has several subdivisions. There will be seven general contests on Thursday, thirteen on Friday, and eight on Saturday.

All entries for the contests must be in the hands of M. E. Selecman, director of information, by April 12, in order that complete arrangements for the contests may be made in ample time. All schools sending contestants must be members of the Northwest Missouri High School Association.

No person who has won a first place in any other than track and field contests will be eligible to compete in the same contests this year. This is to stimulate interest in the contests and obtain a larger number of contestants.

Judges for the contests will be chosen by Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College. The judges will be disinterested parties, and will be selected in so far as is feasible from outside the college.

Headquarters and the bureau of information for the contests will be located at the Maryville Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. A. R. Perrin will be in charge of entertainment for all contestants.

One of the important things in connection with the contests will be the annual business meeting of the Athletic Association. Many matters of importance are expected to be presented at this meeting. Chief among these will be that of aligning the organization with the principles of the newly-organized state association.

The State Teachers College will provide room and board and a season ticket for the entire program to each contestant who is officially entered; provided all meals are taken at the College cafeteria or at the place assigned, and on tickets furnished by the entertainment committee and all lodging is at the place assigned by the entertainment committee. The tickets and assignments for entertainment will be sent in advance to the superintendents or principals of the respective schools.

Entertainment will begin with lodging Wednesday evening for those contestants who cannot arrive by a later train in time for first contest. The entertainment assignments will be made so as to allow contestants time to arrive by train for the first event in which they are entered. All entertainment will close with supper Saturday evening except in case contestant cannot reach home after his final event on Saturday. In such a case entertainment closes with lodging Saturday night.

Community Meeting at Davis School Friday

Leslie G. Somerville will speak at a community meeting to be held at the Davis school, south of Maryville on the pavement, Friday night. Patrons of the district are also on the program. The public is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Paul Campbell and Mrs. Owen Campbell of Barnard are spending the day with Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Coil.

Overrules Injunction Against Horton Trial

Purdy, Mo., Man Announces He Will Appeal to Supreme Court—Charged With Selling Licenses.

Jefferson City, March 24.—Judge Henry Westhues of the Cole County Circuit court today dissolved temporary injunction, issued September 12, restraining the state board of health from trying Dr. R. B. Horton of Purdy, Mo., on charges of obtaining his license to practice by misrepresentation of his educational qualifications.

Horton announced he would appeal to the Supreme Court. Horton, according to statements of witnesses, was a sales agent in the illicit disposal of medical licenses to ill-prepared medical students during a former regime of the board of health.

SIR AUSTEN IN TECHNICAL WIN

DIFFICULTIES STILL FACE BRITISH FOREIGN MINISTER.

U. S. POLICY ATTACKED

Winston Churchill Declares This Nation Is Responsible For Chaos In Europe.

London, March 24—Sir Austen Chamberlain's speech in the House of Commons last night in defense of his policies at Geneva won him a technical victory but there is plenty of evidence today that the difficulties of the foreign minister are not over.

The Manchester Guardian voices anew the demand that Sir Austen give up his portfolio. The opposition press is vigorous in its denunciation of Sir Austen. The conservative press, following the lead of Premier Baldwin, has rallied to the defense of Chamberlain momentarily. The Morning Post, organ of the ultra-conservatives, declares that the really important thing is that, due to the League of Nations, Europe cannot settle her difficulties which she could have done had there been no League of Nations and that the only thing in the way of European peace today is the League.

London, March 24.—The United States policy with regard to inter-allied debts was bitterly attacked in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequor, indirectly charged that the refusal of the United States to cancel European debts was responsible for the financial chaos in Europe.

Churchill declared he estimates the United States will virtually receive from its European debtors fully 60 per cent of the German reparations paid to the allies.

Determined No Blame Shall Fall on U. S. A.

Coolidge Wants Country To Have No Part In Causing Arms Parley Failure.

Washington, March 24.—President Coolidge is determined that none of the blame for the possible failure of the League of Nations forthcoming disarmament conference shall fall on American shoulders.

This was the explanation advanced in official circles here for the decision to go ahead with plans for complete American co-operation, despite the preponderent belief among the high administration officials that the conference is foredoomed to accomplish nothing if carried out along the lines already laid down.

County School Head Has Sinus Affection

Leslie G. Somerville, county superintendent of schools, is suffering from a sinus abscess, an affection of the cavity in the substance of the bone of the skull which communicates with the nostrils and which contains air. He underwent a slight operation yesterday but was able to be in his office today.

Excuse Us, Please.

Yesterday's Democrat-Forum and Tribune had a description of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Clark of Prather avenue. A typographical error made one sentence read: "Both are unusually vigorous for their ages, and their faculties are unimpaired."

It was written: "Their faculties are uniimpaired."

JOINTLY FOR MODIFICATION

WETS OF BOTH PARTIES WOULD WIPE OUT PARTY LINES.

CHICAGOANS TO TALK

Representatives Wax Vicious In Discussion Of Prohibition In House This Afternoon.

Washington, March 24.—The prohibition struggle in Congress reached a new point today with a tentative agreement reported reached between Republican and Democratic wets to wipe out party lines and unite behind a modification program.

This development in the intermittent skirmish between both wet and dry camps was scheduled to be officially signed and sealed tonight at a conference between both Senate and House modificationists of all political faiths.

The meeting, which it is understood will be held at the home of Representative John Phillip Hill, Republican of Maryland, has been clothed in deepest secrecy. It was learned today, however, that Senator Edge, Republican of New Jersey, Senator Edwards, Democrat of New Jersey, Senator Bruce, Democrat of Maryland, and others from the upper chamber have indicated they will attend.

Practically the entire Tammany delegation from New York, swelled by a goodly representation from other moist sections of the country, will make up the House representation, it is understood.

As a further indication of the gravity of the prohibition fight in Congress, there were reports today that the conference might decide to organize a group of stump speakers to carry the issue throughout the country during the coming Congressional election.

Chicago, March 24.—When the Senate judiciary committee holds its open hearings on prohibition, Cook County will send a committee to tell how the Volstead law has worked here. The committeee will consist of heads of various county institutions and city departments, whose work has placed them in direct contact with conditions effected by prohibition.

To back up their observations, members of the committee will offer a mass of figures taken from various records.

The naming of the committee comes as a sequel to a resolution passed by the county board, deploring conditions since the advent of prohibition.

Washington, March 24.— Another verbal storm over prohibition shook the House this afternoon.

The debate ranged all the way from how drunk Congressmen used to get before Constitutional prohibition to the personal habits of George Washington.

Representative O'Connor, Democrat of New York, in an attack upon Dr. Clarence True Wilson, president of the Methodist Episcopal board of prohibition, temperance and morals, characterized some of Wilson's utterances as "lies and a deliberate canard."

This led Representative Blanton to move that the words be expunged from the records, but O'Connor refused to withdraw them.

Gooding Bill Decided in U. S. Senate Today

Result Of Vote On Issue, Which Has Slit Body Wide Open, In Doubt.

Washington, March 24.—With the result in doubt, the Senate will reach a final vote on the Gooding long and short haul bill at 3 o'clock this afternoon, under the agreement entered into last week. The controversy, raging over alleged discrimination in the freight rates allowed by the interstate commerce commission on transcontinental shipments, has split the Senate wide open without regard to party lines.

Senators from the industrial states are generally opposed to the measure while those from the agricultural states, Republican and Democratic Senators alike favor the proposal.

Weather

Generally fair and much colder tonight and Thursday; lowest temperature tonight about 38.

FEWER INVENTIONS WANTED.

If Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, "surprised" the American Institute of Electrical Engineers the other day when he told them that they ought to invent fewer things, he probably surprised a lot of other people, too. There is a commonly accepted belief that continual improvement of our mechanical devices is good. But is it?

Mr. Baker considers the frequent adoption of slight mechanical improvements as one of the greatest wastes of the present day. It throws into the discard so many articles, which have not fulfilled their useful possibilities, thus wasting raw materials and money as well as human energy.

All of this is easier to understand when specific examples are cited. It was reported a few years ago that Luther Burbank had evolved a great many plant improvements, which had not yet been made public. Haste in putting them to general use would have upset and dangerously disturbed many legitimate interests. In proper time they may be made public, to the benefit of everybody concerned.

Some companies, such as telephone corporations, have filed away hundreds of minor improvements. They are not withheld now in order to retard developments but because it seems wise policy. All of them will be used when the companies are ready to change the whole design of their equipment. To put these minor improvements in operation one at a time would mean wastefully junking other equipment and materials still good for much service.

INVITING REVOLUTION.

A Chicago dispatch says that "Big Tim" Murphy's return from the federal penitentiary will be celebrated with a big parade in which thousands will take part just like the coming of a presidential candidate. Murphy was sent up for complicity in a $385,000 mail robbery and another indictment is hanging over him charging him with a part in another one.

When the people of any city insist on making heroes of crooks and gang leaders, and are permitted to do so, it is about time to send some civilizing influence into that city as a protection to other parts of the country that do not feel that way. History tells us that, when the people of former civilizations began to lose respect for law and to value human life lightly, and to worship those who openly defied those things which make for law and order, that the governments of those nations fell, that their civilization crumbled and their power waned.

It is well to think of these things. No nation can survive that does not respect law and acknowledge the right of its people to make and enforce wholesome laws. The United States is not proof against the law of the ages. It is comparatively perhaps no stronger today than Greece was in the day of her brilliant power.

Excelsior Springs—Preparations are being made here for city-wide beautification. Landscape artists have submitted plans.

Widow Cries For Joy

"I couldn't eat anything but raw eggs and sweet milk and was so weak I could hardly walk across the room. I would have been in my grave today if I hadn't taken MAYR'S when I did. When I think how I have suffered with my stomach and how good I feel now I cry for joy." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. All druggists.—Adv.

New Treasure Hunt Organized in Cuba

To Seek Revolutionary Funds Amounting To $200,000—Veterans Of War In Search.

Havana, Cuba, March 23.—A treasure hunt for revolutionary funds amounting to $200,000 in United States currency is being organized by veterans of the Cuban War for Freedom, at Aguacate, Cuba.

According to the veterans, just before the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor in 1898, a Cuban filibustering expedition raised $200,000 in the United States. The Spaniards, getting wind of the fund, detailed soldiers from Havana to go to Aguacate to investigate the rumor. The Spaniards were successful in locating the group of patriots having the money and pursued them so closely that one of the Cubans buried the money in a secret cache. The Cuban was killed by the Spanish soldiers and the secret died with him.

The remainder of the band now believe they have located the approximate location of the treasure on a farm owned by an American and are endeavoring to get permission from the owner to search for the money on his property.

Cuba abounds in tales of buried treasure. Pirates of the Spanish main are supposed to have buried some of their loot on the Isle of Pines. Several of the keys off the south coast are thought to contain treasure buried by pirates.

Another story circulated in Havana is of a group of Germans, who, when Cuba joined the Allies against Germany, buried $3,000,000 in cash and jewels on the beach a few miles from Havana, to prevent confiscation by the Cuban government. A group of American adventurers, overhearing instructions for locating the treasure being given to representatives of the Germans in Havana several years later, made an effort to reach the place where the treasure was buried ahead of the representatives but arrived only to find a freshly dug hole in the earth.

Business Condition of Country Is Good

Savings Accounts Total Twenty-Five Billion Dollars—Increase Two Billion In Last Year.

Washington, March 23.—The business health of the United States is better now than ever before in history, according to under-secretary of the treasury Winston.

Savings accounts totaling nearly $25,000,000,000 are indicative of real prosperity, he said. Savings in the past year increased more than $2,000,000,000.

With this huge amount of cash on hand the country has a "working surplus" of currency for investment greater than the rest of the world combined. Interest in the savings deposits, at 3 per cent, will give business an additional $75,000,000 for investment purposes this year.

Meantime, another barometer of prosperity was seen in the income tax returns which to date since March 15, totaled more than $380,000,000. Treasury officials said that large income tax returns despite lower taxation rates clearly showed the nation was not suffering from depression.

Three Million Cars Junked Every Year

Such an authority as Petroleum Age estimates that the demise of three million motor vehicles every year is due in a large measure to faulty lubrication and greasing.

Cheap cars, expensive cars—three million of them—sent to the scrap heap for want of the right oil.

You may have considered lubrication unimportant. Oil is the life blood of the engine—as the impressive statement quoted above strikingly proves.

You will not realize "full value" from your car investment, if faulty lubrication sends it to the scrap heap ahead of time.

Many repair bills and many bills for over-hauling are the direct result of failure to appreciate the importance of proper lubrication.

No motorist is deliberately careless about so important a question as lubrication, but many are thoughtlessly careless.

It is a simple matter to keep your car perfectly oiled at all times. Use Polarine!

You can benefit from the years of scientific work of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) staff of lubricating engineers.

Consult chart At Any Standard Oil Service Station or Authorized Garage. It will tell you the exact grade of Polarine to give perfect lubrication in your individual car.

Drain your crankcase. Cleanse your motor thoroughly with Polarine Flushing Oil, and refill with the correct grade of Polarine as specified. Do this regularly and at frequent intervals and your car will last longer.

Correct and scientific lubrication pays!

ANDREW - NODAWAY DRAINAGE COMMISSIONERS REPORT.

LARGEST $55 AN ACRE

Assessment Is Step In Enlarging Of Territory Affected By Straightening of Platte River.

A total of $25,305 is assessed in benefits in a report filed today with the Circuit Court by U. S. Wright, L. E. Carpenter and John Burch, commissioners appointed by the court in connection with an application to extend the boundaries of the Andrew-Nodaway Drainage District.

The benefits range from nothing to $55 an acre. The commissioners awarded no damages.

The Andrew-Nodaway Drainage District was organized to straighten the channel of the Platte river between a point north of Conception Junction, in this county, and the Whitesville bridge in Andrew County. The district became operative about three years ago, and the ditch was completed last year. The channel, after straightening, is seventeen miles long.

When the first survey was made, some of the overflowed land was not included in the district, according to the board of supervisors of the district. They filed a petition in Circuit Court several months ago to extend the boundaries of the district to include such land, and it was to assess benefits and damages on this acreage that the commissioners were appointed.

They met Monday at the Farmers State Bank at Conception Junction and elected Mr. Wright as chairman. Then, in company with Jacob Nelson, secretary of the board of supervisors, and Charles Jackson, another member of the board, they visited all the land in question.

They reported that no additional rights-of-way or improvements were needed, and found no lands damaged, and no cost of additional improvements to estimate.

The benefits were assessed as follows:

Poll Closes With Big Wet Majority

Half of Newspaper Voters Favor Modification, 31 Per Cent for Repeal, According to NEA.

Copyright, 1926, by NEA Service. Reproduction in whole or in part is prohibited unless credit is given NEA Service.

By NEA Service.

Cleveland, O., March 24.—With nearly a million and a half votes cast against continuation of the prohibition law in its present form, the nation-wide prohibition referendum conducted by NEA Service and client newspapers has come to an end.

Final tabulation of the returns from 326 newspapers in all parts of the country which co-operated with NEA Service shows that a grand total of 1,747,630 votes was cast.

These votes are divided as follows:

For retention of the prohibition law as it now stands, with strict enforcement	330,779
For repeal of the prohibition law	547,866
For modification of the prohibition law so as to allow the sale of wine and beer	868,985
Grand total	1,747,630

Thus the final wet majority is in excess of 5 to 1.

Wets and drys will differ as to the significance of the straw vote.

Almost exactly 50 per cent of the voters in the poll cast their ballots in favor of modification. Those for outright repeal numbered slightly over 31 per cent; those for keeping the law as it now stands, 19 per cent. The wet strength, in other words, amounted to 81 per cent of the total vote.

The wettest and dryest cities in the nation, according to the prohibition poll, are New York City and Hillsboro, Tex. New York went wet by a ratio of 50 to 1, and Hillsboro went dry by nearly 45 to 1.

In Missouri, the vote totaled:

South Dakotan Overwhelmingly Renominated at Primary Yesterday—Gov. Gunderson Polls Big Vote.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 24.—Peter Norbeck of Redfield, senior United States senator renominated in the state wide Republican primary yesterday.

With unofficial returns late last night swelling the senator's lead, his opponent, George J. Danforth of Sioux Falls, said that "in his opinion the senator has won."

Meanwhile, Governor Carl Gunderson, seeking renomination on the Republican ticket, had increased his lead over C. E. Coyne of Fort Pierre, but he was running well behind Senator Norbeck's total.

From his home in Redfield, Senator Norbeck claimed "a great victory," while his headquarters here issued this statement:

"Senator Norbeck attributes his great victory to the realization of business men and farmers alike that agriculture is the single industry on which our welfare depends, and that they are looking to congress to remove the handicap that at this time oppresses the farming industry."

When 853 of the state's 1,898 precincts had reported, the unofficial tabulations gave Norbeck 33,181 and Danforth 15,723, while Gunderson polled 30,432 to Coyne's 19,766.

In the only Democratic contest, that for governor, W. J. Bulow of Beresford had 630 votes and R. O. Richards of Huron, 289 votes, when one-third of the state was in, indicating a marked lack of interest in that primary.

George W. Wright of Huron, seeking the Republican state chairmanship, had 11,163 votes to 4,797 polled by John P. Bleeg of Sioux Falls.

Ozark Fruit Outlook Is Bright This Year

Springfield, Mo., March 24.—A banner fruit year is expected in the Ozark region of southern Missouri and northern Arkansas, by P. A. Rogers sales manager of the Ozark Fruit Growers association. The association handles the greater part of the fruit sent from this region. The strawberry crop from the region will total 1,882 cars, Rogers estimated, while a thousand cars of grapes will be shipped. The onion crop will also be above last year, if indications at present prove true.

Nodaway Countians Buy Feeder Calves

W. S. and Lawrence Nicholson to Graze Forty Head Until Next Winter.—Say Wheat Looks Good.

W. S. Nicholson and his son, Lawrence, both of whom are farmers and feeders south of Hopkins, bought forty head of calves for stocker purposes on yesterday's livestock market at St. Joseph. The calves were bought at $7.50 and averaged around 450 pounds a head. The two Nicholsons, who operate separate farms, expect to graze the cattle this spring and summer and feed them out next winter.

"We have a load about finished for market on our place now and will ship them in the near futures," Lawrence Nicholson told a representative of the Stock Yards Journal.

Wheat in his neighborhood looks good, according to Mr. Nicholson, and plowing has been started but is limited to breaking up of sod. He predicted that spring pigs will be plentiful and healthy because Nodaway County sows are free from the "flu."

Other Nodaway County stockmen who visited the St. Joseph market yesterday were Orville McMillen, Hopkins; R. E. Kyle, Graham; C. D. Leighty, Maryville; G. G. Downing, Hopkins; and F. N. Martin, Clearmont.

Leatha and Lucile Lawson were Sunday guests of Miss Maxine Rhodes.

R. V. McKee and family were in Maryville Saturday afternoon.

Miss Alta Moore, who is a student at S. T. C. is away from classes because of serious eye trouble. It is probably caused by too close application to her studies.

Quite a number of men of the church were building a garden fence at the parsonage last Friday. Those helping her were John Edwards, Harry Martin, J. E. Porter, John Anderson and hired hand, Alva Hunt, Lewis Moore, G. H. Null and Mr. McElroy. This improvement is a much needed one.

A rehearsal for the Easter service was held last Saturday. Mrs. Null, Mrs. M. A. Brown and Mrs. B. K. Lewis are the committee that has this program in charge.

Mrs. A. Lawson and daughters, Leatha and Lucile were trading in Maryville last Saturday.

Oat sowing has commenced in this neighborhood.

The roads around in this community have been put in good condition, and it is possible to get somewhere again; there are, however, some places that need repair. It is hoped that the people of this vicinity will not think that it will not be necessary to drag any more now that the trustees have discarded the "overseer" system and employed a full time man on the patrol plan. A large part of his work will be devoted to rounding up the pike by the use of the grader, and there will be plenty of opportunity to supplement the patrol dragging with individual work. Let's all co-operate. It is expected that the corner by the church will be rounded off soon and be ready for use and thus another dangerous place will be eliminated.

The regular services at the Sunday morning hour were given over to a presentation of the life and work of Fanny J. Crosby. Papers were given by Mrs. Myra Craven and Dorris McKee. Talks were made by the pastor and W. I. Lewis. Three special selections in music, one an instrumental duet by Maxine Rhodes and Kathryn, and a vocal duet by Misses Leatha and Lucile Lawson were enjoyed by the congregation. Services were announced for next Sunday as usual.

John Edwards was helping Rev. Underwood with garden work last Monday.

(School Notes)

On account of the illness of a sister Miss Kibbe was unable to meet the orchestra for instruction or rehearsal last week.

The grade pupils of Pioneer will present in the church the 3 act comedy, "Aunt Jerusha on the War Path." Don't fail to be present. Lots of fun.

The High School held a market window in Maryville last Saturday, through the kindness of the Montgomery Shoe Co. A neat [illegible] was realized, as everything sold. The window was in charge of the following young ladies all Sophomores, Ogle McKee, Lucile Lawson and Kathryn Lewis. Mrs. Ford had general charge of the arrangements.

Steady improvement in track work is noted.

The courts were dragged last Friday, and placed in fine condition. Playing in the tournament will start soon.

Observe that nifty, new, all steel, copper wired racket belonging to Ogle McKee. It's a dandy.

Senior play practice has reached the second act stage. Mr. Ford is in charge of this part of the play.

There will be several entries in Household Arts from Mrs. Ford's class in sewing.

Franklin Dowden is suffering from a badly sprained ankle since Sunday night. He pleads not guilty to any hasty exit.

Look Out! Don't drive over the courts.

Donald Neal sprained an ankle quite severely while practicing the high jump Monday.

"Deuce," is a frequent ejaculation on the tennis courts these days.

After Fifty-Five Years of Teaching, Miss Marion Huff is Still Young in Living, Though Not in Years; Formerly Taught in Nodaway County School

After fifty-five years of teaching—not day-after-day teaching in the same old place but teaching which has taken her into the interesting, out-of-the-way corners of the world—is the record of Miss Marion Huff, 77, who spent last night here with her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Haller.

Miss Huff, whose home now is in Chicago, began her career in the rural schools Iowa at the age of 15. Eventually it carried her into California and New Mexico, into Porto Rico, to the Philippines and to China.

Part of Miss Huff's teaching was done in the rural schools of Nodaway County and in Maryville High School. Always she found her profession interesting, and, perhaps because of that, it seemed to provide more stirring events for her.

"My life," she admits, "has been a full one."

Among those whom Miss Huff remembers as her pupils in the early days of Maryville High School were Arch Edwards, Elmer Trueblood, John and Edwin Bellows, Mary Growney, (now Mrs. Elmer Trueblood), Ed Curfman, and Gertie Conrad, now Mrs. Curfman, Marshall E. Ford, Cory, Andy and T. H. Cook, John De Lana, Richard Anthony, Fred Rowley and Scott Campbell, now Mrs. George B. Baker.

Teaching in those days was not exactly the same as it is now. Even in Maryville's schools, school discipline had not been thoroughly established and there was an occasional insurrectionary outbreak which called for a firm hand. Miss Huff passed over these troublous times with a smile. It is enough to say that after others had failed she succeeded in establishing and maintaining discipline—and she afterwards received the sincere thanks of the restless, vigorous youngsters whom she "took in hand."

Miss Huff was born in Indiana, but she was of the South. Her father was a Kentuckian and a slaveholder; her mother was a Virginian. Today Miss Huff is a committeewoman of the Roosevelt Club, one of the influential Republican organizations of Chicago.

Came First as Visitor.

The young teacher came to Nodaway County first as a visitor. Her uncle, Thomas Huff, who lived for many years west of Quitman, had asked her pay his family a visit and she did so. Once there, she accepted the district school. Then her aunt died, followed in six weeks by her uncle, and Miss Huff's family moved down from Iowa to take the farm.

Miss Huff remembers her uncle as a much-loved man and a power in Civil War days. "He was Union, but even the worst Rebel loved Uncle Tom," she commented.

When she began teaching in the rural schools, the young "schoolma'am" had finished the seventh grade—and at that, she was better prepared than many of the early-day teachers. As she continued teaching, she took private instruction to keep ahead of her classes. For some time she traveled fifty-seven miles each week for this instruction. She finally attended college at Oxford, Ohio, for four years. But even after that, she continued to study, and she hasn't stopped yet.

Still Active at 77.

At 77, she is still active—no longer teaching, but making more money than ever as the representative of a Chicago publishing house. She visits the Chicago schools and gives talks. She also speaks on the Orient before various clubs.

"Why shouldn't I be active?" she protests vigorously. "Why should years make any difference? All we have to do is to keep our mental faculties."

She did not confine her activities in Nodaway County to school teaching. For a time she was postmistress at Burlington Junction, winning the appointment over eleven men.

It was in 1893 that Miss Huff really began her career, and poor health was partly responsible. In that year she attended the World's Fair at Chicago. Then, in quest of better health, she struck out alone for California, a somewhat courageous thing for a woman to do in the nineteenth century.

Starts on Western Trip.

She found her way to Silver City, N. M., where she taught in the mountain schools. In 1900, having taken the civil service examination, she went to Porto Rico as head of the English department of the public schools at San Juan. Under her supervision were thirty-six schools.

The Porto Rican climate was unfavorable, and Miss Huff returned to Chicago. "In Porto Rico, it was like taking a Turkish bath day and night," she explained.

In 1901 Miss Huff took special work at the University of Chicago, and then, in 1902, she again set forth, this time for the Philippines. First she taught in a high school about fifty miles from Manila, but after six months she was transferred to the city.

In Midst of Cholera Epidemic

Miss Huff arrived in the Philippines as a cholera epidemic was raging. Two hundred died each day, and there was no school for two weeks. She herself was infected with the dread disease but recovered. She remained in the Philippines for seventeen years.

Each year, in the vacation period, Miss Huff went to other countries in the Orient, traveling by government cruiser by virtue of her position in the civil service. She visited Japan, Korea, Malay, Borneo, Java—fourteen countries and their island possessions.

Taught in Peking

One vacation she taught English in Peking at the Rockefeller Foundation. She made her home with the family of Dr. Hall, one of the heads of the institution. While she was there there was an outbreak of pneumonic plague. Soon after she left she heard of the death of Dr. Hall.

"Peking is the most wonderful city," Miss Huff declared. "One could stay there for forty years and find something new every day. There one finds discoveries of science and wonderful instruments made ages ago."

Miss Huff likes the Chinese, regards them as a wonderful race. She "despises" the Japanese.

At Peking she visited Indemnity College, established with the United States' share of the penalties exacted from the Chinese as a result of the Boxer uprising. She was one of a committee uprising. She was one of one hundred invited to a reception for the second president of the Republic of China. She was conducted through the "Forbidden city," the emperior's home.

Visits "Temple of Heaven"

She visited also the Temple of Heaven and the Altar of Heaven, some two or three miles outside the Tartar City, the part of Peking which is enclosed by a wall. These temples she declared the "most wonderful" sights in China. They are made of marble, deeply carved. They were visited once a year by the Chinese emperor, who also visited the Temple of Agriculture, nearby, and turned one furrow with a golden plow as an example to his people.

Miss Huff returned to Chicago in 1918 and since has been general saleswoman for the publishers of a school-home reference work. She has a sister, Mrs. A. P. Dike, in Chicago, but maintains her own apartment.

On her visit to Nodaway County, she has visited two other sisters, Mrs. John A. Logan, near Quitman, and Mrs. J. F. Haller, at Wilcox. A brother, W. P. Huff, lives in Stillwater, Okla.

Brings Back Souvenirs

Miss Huff brought back many souvenirs from her stay in the Orient, all interesting and some valuable. She wears a necklace which contains thirteen amethysts which were held in a native's toes and filed with a file. They were set in Ceylon. The stones are so perfectly matched that their owner has been offered many times the price she paid.

She has also a star sapphire ring for which she paid $6 but for which a Chicago jeweler offered the price of fine diamond. A third piece of jewelry is a breastpin of moonstone and jade, set by a Chinese.

In her travels in the Orient, Miss Huff has traversed the Yellow sea, the Chinese sea and the Indian ocean. As one of her most thrilling experiences she remembers a water spout in the Indian ocean, in which a typhoon picked up a column of water and spun it hundreds of feet into the air.

Returns on Transport

She returned to the United States aboard a transport, which, after setting out on its journey, was ordered to return to port. As a fitting climax to Miss Huff's travels, a German spy had been discovered aboard who had prepared to release the German prisoners and destroy the ship. He had already sunk several.

"Travel," Miss Huff concluded, "is the real education."

HOTEL GRAFTON MONDAY NITE DANCE 8 TO 12 ORCHESTRA

The YELLOW STUB

by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the stub of a yellow theater ticket.

JANET RAND, his daughter, breaks her engagement with BARRY COLVIN because of the "disgrace." JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Springfield where the theater is. The stub is traced to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints at hearing police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives mysterious warnings to leave Springfield and later is attacked by two men, but escapes.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church gets Mary's promise to marry him. Jimmy and Olga, out one night, see a man they both recognize—she as the man who got the stub, he as one of his assailants. The man escapes, but they identify him by his police picture as IKE JENSEN.

Church, motoring with Mary, runs over a dog. She breaks her engagement and writes Jimmy a letter, explaining, but the office boy forgets to mail it.

Jimmy gets a phone call from Olga saying she has found Jensen. He rushes to her apartment to find her gone. Her disappearance becomes a newspaper sensation.

He is walking with Barry when he suddenly sees Kid Divis, a known intimate of Jensen's, board a street car. Jimmy follows him and trails him to a lonely house. He goes inside and from a darkened hallway sees Olga, Jensen and Divis in a room. Jensen goes upstairs to answer the telephone. Then Jimmy, with a broken andiron that he has found in the hall, moves swiftly into the room Jensen has just left.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVIII

Divis, if he had been a little quicker in turning, might have seen Rand in time to duck the blow that was aimed at his head with the heavy andiron knob.

As it was, he was too slow, and he didn't know what hit him. Jimmy brought down his crude weapon with crushing force. It hit Divis on the head, just behind the ear. He slumped forward in his chair, his arms sprawled grotesquely on the table, completely "out."

Jimmy sprang to Olga's side.

"Jim!" she breather. "Thank God!"

He fished a knife out of his pocket and with swift strokes cut the cord that kept her prisoner in the chair.

"What did they do to you?" he whispered. "No, don't tell me yet. Wait."

Her head fell forward on his breast as he half lifted her to her feet. She was close to fainting. He eased her back into the chair, patted her wrists to start the sluggish circulation, whispered in her ear:

"Olga, brace up. Pull yourself together. You can't go to pieces just yet—not yet. Please."

She managed to lift her head. "I'm all right, I think. But Jim, how did you get here? How did you—"

"Sh-h-h, not now. Here." He ran swiftly and noiselessly over to Kid Divis, who was still sprawled out across the table. Lifting him in his arms, Jimmy laid him down on the floor. From his hip pocket he pulled out an automatic pistol.

"Here," he said to Olga. "Take this and watch him. If he moves, you cover him, and if necessary don't hesitate to shoot him."

"Jim, I can't."

"You do as I say," he commanded. Then, in a tone less brusque: "Come, now, just sit here and hold it. I'm going upstairs to see if I can find out who's talking to Jensen."

"You take this, then." She held out the pistol to him. "You'll need it."

"No, I've still got this." He brandished the broken andiron.

He looked, her pityingly, at Divis, stretched unconscious on the floor. "It was rotten—hitting him from behind like that—but the only thing to do. He'll come to, I think."

He moved toward the door. "Don't forget," he cautioned. "Keep him covered and if he makes a threatening move, shoot. And if Jensen should happen to come down, shoot him the minute he appears in the door. Take no chances."

Her face blanched. If Jensen should come down. . . . . That could mean only one thing—that Jimmy would not. . . . .

"Jim," she whispered, but he was gone.

Again Jimmy was out in that dimly lighted hall, his feet padding noiselessly over the thin carpet. Upstairs he could still hear the mumble of Jensen's voice speaking over the telephone.

He breathed a prayer of thanks that he had found Olga in time, another that he might in some way learn who was talking to Jensen over the phone.

He had no fear of Jensen now. They had met once before and he had more than held his own. Besides, there was that heavy andiron knob. If he should need it. . . . .

He clutched it tightly in his right hand. Then silently he mounted the dark stairs. Dark except for a narrow strip illuminated by a beam of light from the room where Divis lay and Olga sat watching.

He hesitated just before coming to it. If Jensen happened to be looking he surely would see his shadow as he passed. So he stood a moment and listened.

Jensen's voice still sounded far away, probably coming, Jimmy concluded, from a room, rather than from the upper hall. He seized the banister, pulled himself swiftly past the light and resumed his silent, creeping journey up the stairs.

Silently he mounted the dark stairs.

Jensen had not seen him, he thought, because the man's voice was still a steady rumble. Listening, Jimmy thought it must be coming from a room directly over the one he had just left downstairs.

At the head of the stairs he stopped once more. Jensen's voice was more distinct, but still it was impossible to distinguish his words.

Jimmy thought: "If only he'd mention the other man's name . . . Just once . . . . God! I've got to hear what he's saying."

He moved slowly, silently, up the hall. He was right, he found. Jensen was inside the room, just as he had pictured him. And now Jimmy, crouched outside, hardly daring to breathe, could hear what he was saying:

"Hugh? . . . . Yeah. . . . Well, I'm gettin' ready to pull my freight."

There was a long silence, during which Jimmy imagined the unknown on the other end of the wire was talking to Jensen.

Jensen's drunken rumble resumed: "Yeah, she's here . . . . Well, I might take her along with me, an' if she ain't agreeable I can dump her off some place. The Kid's gonna bring the car tonight. . . . Huh? No, I don't think she would. I don't think she likes me too much."

He laughed loudly at something that must have amused him. "Huh? . . . . No, not me. I'm not bumpin' off any woman. It ain't in my line . . . What do I care if she does tell? I'll be over the border . . . Who, you? No, not a chance. She don't know a thing. Not a thing."

Again he stopped talking, and Jimmy found himself trying to piece together the fragments of conversation, to imagine what the other man must be saying to Jensen.

He heard Jensen say: "Who? Rand?" and his nerves tingled at the mention of his name. That Jensen and his unknown should be discussing him. . . .

"No, Jensen went on, "let the Kid do it. I'm leavin' tonight. . . .Sure, he can. . . . He should 'a got him that night when he took a shot at him. Just a bum break, that's all. . . . Yeah, I got the dough. The Kid give it to me. . . . Yeah, one grand. . . . And say, don't forget. As soon as you hear from me down in Mexico, don't forget to send the rest of it. Five grand. . . . And say, don't try to slip me no double cross, 'cause if you do, your goose is cooked. See? . . . .

"Aw don't bother about Rand. The Kid'll get him if you give him time. . . . Sure."

"So," Jimmy was thinking as the other's voice trailed off again, "it was Kid Divis that took the shot at me that night. Now I wonder why? . . . . . I wonder who it is that's so anxious to 'get' me?"

"No," Jensen was saying, "I'll take her with me. . . . . Sure, she won't get away. I know where to stop. . . got friends. . . . . take me in. . . . sure . . . . . Yeah, Charlie's goin' with me . . . . . most of the' way. . . . .

"You goin' away? What for? . . . Oh, you're thinkin' of it. . . . Naw, I tell you she don't know a thing. You're all right. Safe as a bug in a rug. Ha-ha." Jensen laughed uproariously.

By "she" Jimmy felt certain Jensen was referring to Olga Maynard. He assumed that Jensen wanted to get her out of town so she could not expose him in this kidnaping business.

He shifted his weight a little, relieving his cramped muscles. A board creaked ominously. He held his breath, waiting . . . . . ready to meet Jensen should he rush out of the room.

Jensen, the receiver at his ear, heard it. Still keeping the instrument clapped to the side of his head, he turned questioningly around and peered out at the blackness of the hall.

"Wait a minute," he said. Then after a long pause: "That you, Kid?"

He waited what seemed to Jimmy an interminably long time before he turned back again to the phone. Jimmy breathed a sigh of relief as he heard him say, "All right, go ahead. Thought I heard something in the hall. This house so old. . . . gives me the creeps. . . . . boards squeakin'. . . Go ahead.

"Well, all right, chief. Be good. . . . can't be good be careful. Ha." His deep, grunting laugh filled the room with raucous sound.

"I will. . . . You bet. . . Don't forget about the dough, now. . . . Soon's you hear from me. . . . Yeah. Might do a job for you again some time. . . . . this blows over. . . .All right. . . . . 'Bye."

Jimmy could hear the metallic click as Jensen replaced the receiver on its hook. He rose heavily from his chair. A match flared as he lit a cigaret.

Jimmy still crouched in the hall outside, rose to flatten himself against the wall, and through his mind flashed a memory of a rainy night weeks ago, himself against another wall, waiting. . .

As he straightened up the betraying board squeaked again, loudly. He could hear Jensen stop.

"Who's that?" came his voice. Then, in a loud tone, "Kid, that you?"

He came out of the room in a sudden rush, and loomed up in front of Rand like a monstrous giant, the largeness of his figure emphasized by the darkness.

And then he saw, and Jimmy swung the andiron straight at his head.

But Jensen, unlike Divis, had time to meet the attack. He hung up an arm and the heavy metal knob struck hard, unyielding flish.

With amazing quickness he had grabbed the andiron and wrested it from Jimmy's grasp. A loud crash on the stairs below told Jimmy that he had flung it away.

Jensen's hand went behind him and when he straightened Jimmy saw glinting steel.

"Now, you young mug, I'm going to square with you right away. Right where I want you, eh? How'd you git here? Where's Divis?"

Jimmy made no answer. He had eyes for nothing, thoughts for nothing, save that revolver in Jensen's hand. And suddenly his taut muscles released him in a desperate leap, he launched himself straight at that menacing steel and with his hands sought to tear it from Jensen's grip.

With all his despairing strength he tugged at the other's hand, bending it back on the wrist, unmindful of the punishing blows Jensen was raining in his lowered head.

And then Jensen, in profane agony, released his hold. The weapon went clattering to the floor. Jimmy saw sudden hope, and the revolver, driven by his kicking foot, shot through the railings and clattered to the stairs below.

CHAPTER XLIX

Jensen, snarling in pain, had fallen back, but now he crowded slowly forward toward Rand, his giant paws outstretched, biding his time, waiting to get this mere stripling in his clutches.

He ripped out an oath. "You—, I'll break you in half. . . . . break you in half."

And Jimmy, cornered, unable to escape and rush down the stairs to Olga and the pistol he had given her, read murder in the other's tone and cursed himself for a fool for not having kept the weapon himself; cursed himself again and again for having taken this man so lightly whom he had chanced to thrash when they had met before.

"Dancin' master, eh?" Jensen sneered. "Well, you won't find any room up here for your fancy steps." He reached out a long arm.

And Jimmy, retreating, was suddenly surprised to find there was no wall behind him, but the doorway to the room Jensen had just left. He felt space behind him, and he stepped back into the pitch blackness of the room.

Jensen, framed in the doorway, was a shadowy bulk. He kept on. Suddenly he was inside the room and the door slammed shut behind him.

"Now, cocky, let's see you try and get out." He laughed that throaty rumble of his. "One of us is goin' out, see, but it ain't gonna be you."

Jimmy, retreating to the end of the room, beside the window that opened on foggy blackness, said sharply: "Look here, Jensen, if you take another step, I'll fill you full of lead."

"You're a liar. You ain't got no gun. I'm gonna strike a light."

"Jensen, so help me, if you strike a light, I'll shoot."

But the other laughed, crazily, and Jimmy realized that he had to deal with a man gone Berserk with liquor. "Go on, shoot," he taunted, and Jimmy could hear him fumbling through his pockets.

He thought of making one mad rush, of knocking Jensen to the floor and then grabbing for the door. But what if he should miss the door?

"Hell!" said Jensen, and Jimmy knew he must have discovered he was out of matches. . . . He dared to breathe again.

Jensen said: "No use, son, you're gonna get yours. Plenty of time. I'm right here against the door. Plenty of time to say your prayers."

"Jensen, I'm not agraid of you. Divis is out of the way now. And I can lick you. I licked you once before. He continued craftily: "Why don't you go down and see what's happened to Divis?"

"Hell with Divis." Again that crazy laugh. His whisky-laden breath reached Jimmy across the room. And then he said something that Jimmy Rand had waited months to hear: "I killed your old man . . now I'm gonna finish the job."

Jimmy felt sudden cold—like ice against his heart—and with it came a steadying calm.

He said, between taut lips: "I know you did, Jensen. I've been waiting to hear you say it before I killed you. I've known for weeks that you did it." He felt that, after all, it made little difference to him what happened, so long as he could bury his fingers in the other's throat and choke the brutal, drunken life out of him.

"You did, eh?" and Jensen's voice was a sneering taunt. "How'd you get so smart? Hell, kill me? Huh!"

"You don't believe I've got a gun? I'm waiting, too, Jensen, waiting to have you tell me what I want to know before I use it."

What a gigantic, crazy bluff, he thought. And swhat a still crazier thing to be doing—to sit and bandy words with a man who had him trapped in a dark room, patiently waiting for him to make a move, biding his time to get him in his crushing hands.

Still, he thought, and was surprised at the calm with which he was able to contemplate it, if the other was going to get him he would go down fighting armed with a hatred he had never felt before. Meanwhile, if Jensen would talk—well, he would find out what he could. . . .

"What I want to know," he said, "is who hired you to kill my father. I've known all along you did it. You thought you were shrewd, Jensen, planting that handkerchief in the room. But you didn't intend to leave that stub of a theater ticket. That wasn't so smart. Come on, tell me who was behind it."

"You'd like to know, eh?" There was a crafty ring to Jensen's voice. "Well, I'm not tellin'. Sure, I bumped him off, sure. . . . Called him up at his office. Told him I had news of his father—what's his name?—oh, yes, Thaddeus Rand."

Jensen laughed again. . . . Jimmy thought the sound of it would drive him crazy. "No harm tellin' you about it. You're gonna get yours anyway. Well, he comes right down to the room, see? The room I have in the hotel. Falls for it just like a fish. . . . Pretty smart of me, eh?"

Jimmy's hands twitched. He bit his lip savagely to down the hot anger that was leaping up to destroy his forced calm. And Jensen's voice went on, maddeningly, tauntingly:

"Yeah, pretty smart of me, I'll say. Comes right upstairs an' knocks on the door. . . . An' I says, 'Come in.' Just like that. 'Come in,' I says. Huh-huh-ha."

Again the thick, crazy laughter.

"So he comes in, an' I says, 'What do you want?' and' he says, 'Are you the man,' he says, 'that called me up and said he had news of Thaddeus Rand?'

"'No,' I says. 'You must 'a made a mistake. You got the wrong room, I guess.' Pretty slick, eh, Rand? Oh, I'm not so dumb."

He paused, and the short silence was again broken with a laugh.

Jimmy said, his voice like chilled steel: "And then what?"

"An' then he turns to go. 'Beg your pardon,' he says. Real polite, Rand, I'll say that for him. He's turned around, with his hat in one hand an' his other hand on the door-knob. An' then I lets him have it— Bingo."

He made a loud smacking sound, of fist on palm. "With the old black-jack, Rand, understand. . . . .Good black-jack. Made it myself. . . .Best black-jack in th' world. . . . .Damn you, you got it away from me that night, didn't you?. . . .Never mind, you're gonna get yours in a coupla minutes. . .Plenty of time. . . .

"That's all. I turned on the gas and left him. Pretty smart, wasn't I? It don't make no difference about the ticket stub, Rand, because I'm goin' away from here where they won't find me. . . .First of all, though, I'm gonna break you in half—"

"Jensen, who put you up to it? Who paid you. The same man that paid you that thousand dollars today?"

"What do you know about anybody givin' me a thousand—oh hell, you heard me on the phone. Sure.

"Like to know, wouldn't you? But I'm not goin' back on him. Pretty good pay, he is. Tell you what, Rand. Come on over here an' let me get my hands on you. Then I'll tell you—while I'm breakin' you apart. Huh-huh."

"Jensen," said Jimmy, in a voice that he did not recognize as his own, "I don't know whether you can understand—you probably can't—but I just want you to know that whether you kill me or not I don't give a damn.

"Ten minutes ago I might have cared—but not now." And then Jimmy himself laughed, a hard, strange laugh.

"Jensen, I fell sorry for you, because—well, just because you can't understand and never would if you lived to be a thousand years. I swore one day, in a morgue in Grafton, that I'd kill the man who murdered my father. I've thought about that many times. I didn't know that when that chance came I was going to find myself in a closed room with a man I can't even see as I'm talking.

"Jensen, you're drunk—but you're not so drunk that you're not afraid to lie. And I tell you, that as fruthfully as I stand here, I'm not. Not now. You don't understand that, do you? With that—that heavy thing on your conscience that you just told me about, you can't realize that it's possible for a man to look death in the eye and laugh.

"Here's why I'm not afraid, Jensen—because my longing to kill you—to get my hands on your throat—is stronger even than the desire to live. Not melodrama, you understand; just this—that somehow it'll be all right if I go down trying to get even for what you did to my father.

"That's all." He took a step in the dark. "Jensen, I'm waiting for you."

"You are, eh? Well, that was a pretty little speech you just made, but it don't mean anything. You think you're not afraid, but you will be—when I get my hands on you an' start breakin' you up."

"Why don't you open the door so I can see you?" Jimmy said.

"An' let you get away? Nothin' doin'."

"Oh, all right, I'll open it. I'd kinda like to see you myself while I'm operatin' on you."

There was a sound made by the turning of the knob, and then Jensen's shape was dimmed shadow-like in the doorway; dim light behind him from the refracted beam on the stair-case.

The opening of the door had been quickly done, but even as Jensen was turning the knob, Jimmy was starting forward, and all his strength was behind the blow that landed flush on Jensen's lips.

The other staggered, caught himself against the door-jamb, and then, suddenly, his arms were around Rand, locking him in a grip that was like a mighty vise.

"You would, would you?" He laughed again, that crazy laugh, right in Jimmy's ear, and the latter, his ribs cracking under that terrible pressure, could only struggle feebly to resist.

He was lifted off his feet. Jensen swung him around, then set him down again, and all the time the pressure of those mighty arms was growing stronger.

Jimmy has never been able to explain how it happened, but suddenly Jensen shifted his grip and his hands were around Jimmy's throat. And in that same fractional part of a second during which his huge hands moved, Jimmy had thrown his weight forward and pushed out against Jensen with his arms.

Jimmy heard the cracking of wood, and the other's hands were loose on his throat.

And then the stair rail gave way, and Jensen went crashing through.

FARM GLIMPSES

BY BILLY TILSON.

Dave Dalrymple on the John Gray farm, west of Pickering, is building an addition onto his barn. Judd King and son are doing the carpenter work.

Harry Scott, northwest of Pickering, commenced farming in earnest Monday. He was getting his ground ready for oats and was planting his potatoes. He is planting ½ acre and it is quite a job to cut and drop them. Harry has a fine bunch of young ewes on the farm.

A. P. Seipel, northeast of Pickering has ninety-six spring pigs with several sows yet to farrow. He is feeding over 200 head of last fall shoats and will soon have them ready for the market. Mr. Seipel says the big Duroc is the kind that brings home the bacon.

Herman Smail of the Pickering neighborhood has built a new garage this spring. Mr. Smail has every convenience on the farm.

George Porterfield and Emmett Gray, northwest of Pickering, commenced sowing their oats Monday. They are putting out quite an acreage.

Omer Strong, north of Pickering, has commenced to get his ground ready for corn. Omer is always among the first to begin his corn planting up that way.

Harry Zook, west of Pickering, who lives on the Storm's farm and has had it leased for several years, is breaking out a field of sod that has never had a plow in it. He will put it in corn this spring.

Charles Wilson, who leased the George Jones farm this spring, is making quite an improvement in the looks of the farm. He is rebuilding fences and has put up a cattle shed and a modern henhouse. Mr. Wilson has around 400 laying hens. Mr. Jones won't know his farm is Charley stays on there a few years as it is now undergoing a complete change.

Ave Carmichael, northwest of Pickering, is fencing off a large garden spot and is making it chicken proof.

Mr. Herman Sears, northwest of Pickering, who has been sick since last October, isn't showing much improvement. We visited him for a few moments a few days ago and while bedfast, his disposition is still cheerful and hopeful.

Arch Davis and wife, near Guilford, were Maryville visitors this week. While Mr. Davis was transacting some business Mrs. Davis was shopping among the merchants. Ahch says he has a fine bunch of spring pigs and they are doing fine. He says most of the farmers down that way are having good luck with their spring pigs.

George McDermott and wife, east of Clearmont, were visiting in the city yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. McDermott just lately returned from a five-months stay in California. George says he saw all the sights from Los Angeles down to that famous racing town in Mexico. He says he never crossed the line but gave it a once over.

Sam Ingalls northwest of Pickering was finishing sowing his oats yesterday. Ray Lincoln and Will Ingalls were helping.

Longhorn Steer Now Is Valuable Exhibit

San Antonio, Tex., March 24.—Once the lazy king of the broad plains of Texas, the old longhorn steer has become so rare that it is valuable as an exhibit. This was brought forcibly to the front here with the offer of Albert West to donate one of the few survivors of the great herds of longhorns to the city to be placed in Breckenridge Park. The horns of the steer measures nine feet from tip to tip.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, March 24.—Grain prices closed lower on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Wheat closed from 1¼ to 2⅛ cents under yesterday's close. This grain, after opening higher, suffered a slight decline but this was followed immediately by strengthening on the buying side. The result was a rally in which most of the losses of the early slump were regained. Prices advanced slightly following a second drop as the session progressed. Trading in the pit as a whole was spasmodic to dull.

Corn closed fractionally lower. The trade in this grain was devoid of features with prices in sympathy with wheat.

Oats closed irregular.

Provisions closed lower.

CATTLE HIGHER; HOGS STEADY. LAMBS LOWER.

Kansas City Stock Yards, March 24.—Trade in fat steers developed an active turn today at strong to 25 cents higher prices. The upturn came as the result of continued moderate receipts. Indications are that the runs will remain light. Cows and heifers and stockers and feeders were fully steady. Hog prices were unchanged compared with last weeks close but sharply lower on heavy hogs than the middle of last week. Heavy hogs continue to predominate and the light weight classes are scarce. The first spring lambs of the season sold at $16, a hundred pounds today. Fed lambs broke 25 cents and sheep were steady.

Yesterday's Receipts.

Receipts yesterday were 13,000 cattle, 8,000 hogs, and 11,000 sheep, compared with 13,000 cattle, 12,000 hogs and 10,000 sheep a week ago, and 16,825 cattle, 10,995 hogs, and 5,060 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle.

With total receipts of cattle about the same as a week ago the per cent of fat steers showed a moderate decrease and the loss was made up in butcher cattle and stockers and feeders. Killers were in the competition early for steers and bought freely at strong to 25 cents higher prices. Most sales were up 10 to 15 cents. No prime steers arrived. Some good steers sold at $9.75 to $10.15, and the bulk of the fed steers brought $8.50 to $9.50. Prime kinds would have brought $10.50 or better had they been available. Cows and heifers were in active demand at steady prices. They are still relatively higher than steers. Good to choice yearlings and mixed yearlings will find an increased outlet as the weather warms up. Veal calves were steady to slightly lower, best selling up to $10.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Though receipts of stockers and feeders were larger than a week ago demand was fully equal to the supply and prices ruled firm. Fleshy feeders in some cases were slightly higher. The advancing season keeps the demand strong.

Hogs.

Steady prices compared with last week's close were quoted in the hog division. However the general market is lower than the middle of last week and heavy hogs show a material decline. Light weights are scarce and probably will continue so for some time. Light lights are selling at $13.25 to $13.50; the 165 to 210 pound classes at $12.75 to $13.25; 210 to 250 pounds $12.10 to $12.80; 250 to 325 pounds $11.25 to $12.; packing sows $9.25 to $9.75, stags $9 to $9.50; pigs $13.25 to $14.25.

Sheep and Lambs.

Fed lambs were quoted down 25 cents and sheep were steady. Most of the lambs sold at $12.25 to $13.15. Ewes sold up to $8.75; wethers $9 and yearlings $10.50. Some shorn lambs brought $10.25 to $10.75. A few head of spring lambs, the first of the season, sold at $16.

Horses and Mules.

Offerings of good horses and mules remain below requirements at firm prices. Plain and ordinary kinds are slow sale.

GARDEN TIME NOW AT HAND

FLEETWOOD GIVES SUGGESTIONS ON PLANTING.

GROW A SUCCESSION

Weeds Should Not Be Allowed to Get a Start, County Agent Says.

This is garden time; this is garden weather. Although all of the vegetables should not be planted now, there are many seeds which should find their way into the garden plots about this time of the year, according to J. Ross Fleetwood, county extension agent.

Mr. Fleetwood said, "The beginner often asks: 'How early in the spring can I safely make my garden?' This question is founded upon the supposition that along in the spring, there comes a day when it is best for gardens to be planted, irrespective of the species of plants that grow in them. Not infrequently, on the farm, it is customary to take a day off and make the garden. The idea is that once this troublesome job is out of the way, it will no longer interfere with other work. There is no best day to make a garden, but there is a proper time for the planting of each species which is grown in the garden.

Should Plant Some Early.

"There are a number of species of vegetables which do best if started while the weather is cool. They will make growth at slightly above the freezing point, and they will endure more or less freezing without serious injury. Such species should be planted as early as the ground can be worked in spring. Among them are the following: Onions, garden peas, sweet peas, parsnip, spinach and salsify. In Central Missouri, these may be started in February or early March.

"Another group which can be planted slightly later, perhaps about the middle of March consists of lettuce, radishes, parsley and chard. These may be followed in late March or early April with carrots, beets, spring turnips and potatoes.

Corn and Beans in April.

"The next group which may be planted between the first and the middle of April, consists of sweet corn, and early garden beans. A still later group comprises those which will not make growth until the soil is warm, and which will be killed often by a slight frost. This comprises lima beans, okra or gumbo, cucumbers, melons, cantaloupes. The latter should not be planted until May or early June. They are vegetables which will not only be killed by frost, but if cool evenings prevail after they come up, they will, even though not literarly killed, be so stunted and injured by the cold as never to make satisfactory plants. This attention to planting so as to give each species its proper temperature is one of the most important points in successful vegetable growing."

Do Not Allow Weeds.

Weeds should never be allowed to get a start, according to Mr. Fleetwood. Once a garden of small vegetables becomes infested with weeds, it may be more troublesome and expensive to clean them out than the vegetables are worth. Furthermore, vegetables that struggle for a time in competition with weeds or in a crusty soil are frequently so weakened in their growth that they may never give satisfactory returns.

Mr. Fleetwood said that there are some vegetables which mature quickly, last but a short season, and should be grown in succession to secure the best results. Radishes should be sown repeatedly, about a month apart. Lettuce soon goes to seed after it has reached its best maturity for the table, so young plants should be kept constantly going on.

"Vegetables, to be good, should be pushed as rapidly as possible after planting," he said.

Gardening has already been started in Maryville. There are many persons who already have many of their seed in the ground. There are also a number of garden plots which are still too moist for plowing.

Mr. Fleetwood said that every garden can be made better by planting and cultivating it in a scientific manner, rather in the hap-hazard form employed by so many.

Will Make Strong Bid for Older Boys' Meet

Hi-Y Club at High School Lays Plans to Bring State Conference to Maryville.

A permanent committee of three boys has been appointed by the Hi-Y Club of the Maryville High School to act on authority of the organization in creating and promoting an interest in bringing the Older Boys Conference, held annually over Missouri, here this year. Homer Warner, Paris Phipps, and Walter Allen will serve in that capacity with Lawrence Wray, president of the Club, as ex-officio member.

Last November, when the local churches and the Hi-Y Club sent fifteen boys and a delegation leader to Chillicothe to the conference, the delegation extended an invitation that the conference be held in Maryville. The invitation was filed in the state department of the Young Men's Christian Association at St. Louis, and recently word has come to the High School organization asking what support it could guarantee. Hannibal and Trenton are making efforts to secure the conference. The state committee of the Older Boys Conference, made up of prominent boy workers over the state, will meet within the next few months to decide where the conference will be held.

The committee will confer with the Chamber of Commerce, ministers, Sunday-school superintendents, the College, and club leaders in respect to the conference.

Such a conference would bring 150 or 200 boys from points over Northern Missouri here and would be the first time that such a gathering was ever held here of its nature.

Would Limit Speeding to 40 Miles An Hour

Chiefs Of Police In Various Sections of Country, Recommend Automatic Device To Regulate Cars.

Washington, March 24.—Mechanical devices which would make it impossible for any automobile to travel faster than forty miles an hour were recommended in a report of 400 chiefs of police submitted to the national conference on a street and highway safety here.

"Speed maniacs" the chiefs reported, are responsible for more traffic deaths than any other group of drivers. The device, they say, would therefore help solve the problem of traffic safety.

MAKING PLANS FOR VENTURES

BANDS OF DARING MEN TO FAR REACHES OF EARTH.

MANY FITTING OUT

Seven Aim For North Pole—Others Go To Asia, Greenland, Egypt And Other Sections Of World.

Washington, March 24.—To the far reaches of the earth this summer, bands of daring men—in the name of science—will set forth on "expeditions."

Two hundred of these venteures are now fitting out. Seven among them aim for the North Pole.

Others go to the "Cradle of Man" in faraway Asia. Still others will seek out the "storm center" in Greenland, while yet others will burrow into the sands of Egypt to wrest fresh secrets from the land of antiquity.

One of these numerous ventures will hunt out "The Mother Goddess of Kish" in Mesopotamia.

Still other men with a thirst for knowledge, will delve into the mysteries of sunspots and sun heat in Asian sands that few white men know.

More scientific expeditions will be in the field this summer than ever before in the history of the world.

Scientific institutions in Washington are already employing extra help to file information concerning the myraid of scientists who will take leave of civilization in the next six months and invade almost every unexplored section of the globe.

The files of the National Geographic Society and the Smithsonian Institution are several weeks behind. No single official of either organization can remember a tenth of the expeditions that have been planned for the Spring and Summer.

The seven polar expeditions scheduled to go forward shortly are given the most important position in the reference files.

Archaeological expeditions, such as Count Prorok's perennial excavations in North Africa, Roy Chapman Andrews' return to the Gobi desert for more dinosauri, and the Mason-Spinden expedition to the Maya cities in Central America, hold second place.

Other expeditions are divided according to their aim. A dozen astronomical expeditions are setting out; scientists and game hunters are leaving by the score for wild beast haunts; geographers, geologists, biologists, paleontologists and oceangraphists have sailed or will sail shortly.

Although the seven polar expeditions appeal most to the popular imagination, the half dozen other geographical expeditions are far more important to science.

The Greenland expeditions, for instance, that will set out in the early summer to penetrate the ice cap and explore thousands of acres that have never been traversed by man, have a greater scientific interest than the dashes to the pole.

One of the Greenland expeditions, headed by Professor W. H. Hobbs of the University of Michigan, will attempt to find the "storm center," said to be in the center of the vast island, where the noted northeast hurricanes spawn. The fixing of this spot will mean a considerable advance in the science of meterology and will solve numerous problems of this sort.

The Hobbs party will traverse the island by airplane and will check their observations by radio. The expedition will sail from New York in July.

"Phanto mof Opera" at College This Week

Lon Chaney has triumphed again. In "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" he played "Quasimodo," who turned half-angel to save his beloved Cathedral; as "The Phantom of the Opera" he turns all devil to ruin a city—for love. It is the strangest, most compelling role the famous star has ever attempted; this queer, half-mad creature about whom Gaston Leroux wove his French Classic; it is certainly the strangest, most breathless film production the public has ever been offered.

"The Phantom of the Opera" is the story of a man with the gifts of a god and the face of a devil—and a soul, once noble, warped by his own physical ugliness. It is a great study in psychology—but it is more—it is a great human document told in terms of thrills—and more thrills.

In this picture which will be shown at the College Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of this week the thrills are told in a gorgeous setting—great crowds and spectacular scenes.

Chaney wears the strangest, most mysterious make up that even that master of illusion has ever attempted, and his acting of the complex part is a classic. Mary Philbin was never more appealing—even in "Merry Go Round" than as the little opera singer for whom the Phantom launches a reign of terror, takes life by wholesale, and finally loses in death. Norman Kerry plays her lover and ultimate rescuer—a dashing, somewhat spectacular figure as a French nobleman.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hagg and son of Bolckow were Maryville visitors yesterday.

Dr. J. E. Pierpoint of Skidmore was in Maryville today.

Irving Berlin, song writer, and his society bride, Ellin Mackay, are now in the Madeira Islands on their honeymoon. This exclusive picture was taken as they sunned themselves on the rocks after a dip in the sea.
